Time waits for no one. When transferring key employees around the world, a busy HR manager is looking for dependable, seamless service delivery.

And there's just one place to look: The FIDI Global Alliance - the only network of global moving and relocation specialists conforming to an internationally recognised quality standard.

When you are making timely decisions about international moving, look for:

Quality

The FIDI Global Alliance has its own unique quality programme held by all members.

Assurance

Compliance with the quality programme is independently monitored every two years by Ernst & Young.

Control

Provided members attain compliance, FIDI certifies their competence.

Network

FIDI has over 500 members in 100 countries worldwide, certified under the industry's only quality standard.

Seamless

By specifying a FIDI company at departure and destination, companies can enjoy the benefit of the same quality processes from the start to end of every shipment.

Knowledge

FIDI trains more people in international moving than any other organisation.

Professionalism

FIDI offers members a comprehensive range of financial, marketing and technical services to support their business.

Planning a successful move is a bit like building a house. All the key elements have to be drawn together and co-ordinated in a single operation.

Efficient packing using modern techniques and materials is one thing, but there may be cars, antiques or pets to ship; to minimise hotel expenses, the shipment may be split so that essentials are delivered by air.

There will be co-ordination with agents handling housing, schooling, visas, Customs clearance at destination and final delivery.

The broader issues of different time bands, languages, local regulations and import duties all have to be professionally addressed.

This is where working with members of The FIDI Global Alliance is a key factor in a successful international transfer.
